Livestreamed Masses

Today's Gospel presents a parable which is found only in Matthew's Gospel. It is not in the other Gospels. Like in all parables, Jesus tells a story about daily elements, daily things of the life of the people. He presents a picture of the social situation of His time, in which the listeners recognize themselves. At the same time, in the story of this parable, there are things which never take place in the reality of the life of the people, because speaking about the master, Jesus thinks about God, about His Father. This is why in the story of the parable the master does things which are surprising which never take place in the daily life of the listeners. In this strange approach of the master, it is necessary to find the key to understanding the message of the parable.

As the parable explains, the landowner goes out at various times throughout the day hiring various groups of workers to help in his vineyard. As the day progresses, some of the workers worked the entire day while others only worked part of the day. In the case of the last set of workers, they only worked one hour before the workday ended.

The landowner had a strange way of paying the workers at the end of the day. When it was evening, the landowner of the vineyard told his administrator: Call the workers and pay them, beginning from the last ones to the first ones. Here, at the time of drawing the accounts, something strange takes place which does not happen in normal life. It seems that things are inverted. The administrator begins to pay those who were contracted just an hour before. The salary is the same for all: one denarius, as it was agreed with the first ones who were contracted at the beginning of the day. When the first came, they expected to get more but they too received one denarius each. Why does the landowner act like that? Would you do the same? It is precisely in this surprising gesture of the landowner that the key to understanding this parable is hidden.

The surprising explanation of the landowner is the key to the parable. When he is questioned about why all of the workers were paid the same regardless of the time they spent in the vineyard, the response of the landowner is the following: "My friend, I am not being unjust to you. Did we not agree on your payment? Take your earnings and go. I choose to pay the last worker as much as I pay you; have I no right to do what I like with my own? Why should you be envious because I am generous?" These words give the key which explains the attitude of the landowner and indicates the message which Jesus wants to communicate to us.

No matter how long we have been a follower of Christ or how long we have done our best to follow God's plan, we are all welcome into the Kingdom of God with open arms. Perhaps we've followed God for our entire lives or perhaps we've recently found God. In God's eyes, the length of time that we've been devoted to Him doesn't matter as much as the fact that we are devoted Christians now. We shouldn't be envious of God's love for all of us. Instead, we should be thankful for His willingness to welcome us into His Kingdom regardless of how long we have been good and faithful servants.

Blessings,
Deacon Steve Pareja

HABITAT FOR HUMANITY

Seeking help with a "Faith Build" house project on September 28th. No experience needed, Your gifts will be matched with project needs. Contact Deacon Joe at 320-200-4454.

All are welcome to a six-session series on the life, thought, and wisdom of St. Thomas Aquinas on Sunday evenings, 6:30-8:00 p.m., at Sacred Heart, beginning October 11. Fr. Tom will give an overview of the philosophical and theological foundations that have such influence in the presentation of Catholic teaching. Sound dry and boring? Well, it will stretch you a bit, some reading is required, and you will learn who has gone down in history as the one person Aquinas called "stultissimus" (most foolish or ad-dle-headed) and why. Materials will be provided; a donation of $25 is requested if you wish a copy of Ralph McInerney's A First Glance at St. Thomas Aquinas: A Handbook for Peeping Thomists. You can also get your own copy online; used copies are available there at reduced prices.

Who Makes the Coffee?

Early one morning, a husband and wife were playfully arguing over who should get out of the warm bed to make the coffee. Finally, the wife folded her arms and said decidedly, "You have to make the coffee. It's in the Bible!" The husband was shocked. "Is not! Show me!" Pulling out her Bible, the wife opened it to the New Testament and declared, "It says right here — HEBREWS!"

PASTORAL MINISTRY

Living Our Baptism

"That's not fair!" How many times have we heard or thought or said that in our lives? We often hear it from children regarding their given chores. Adults have perhaps not said it aloud but thought it often about how something involving them was handled in a work situation. And many parents may remember saying in response to a child's exclamation of unfairness, "Well life is not always fair."

In our Gospel today, those same words might have been spoken as we read the parable of the landowner employing laborers in his vineyard. Those who worked all day could not imagine that those who worked only a few hours would receive the same wage. Yet the question the employer asks needs to be answered truthfully; "Did you not agree with me for the usual day's wage?" In other words, I paid you what you agreed to work for, why is that not enough?

What Jesus is again teaching in this Gospel is that our human ways are not the same as God's way. We, as humans, do not think or act as God does. Might it be that this parable was meant to teach us about how each of us will be rewarded by God? We, being among those who have lived a lifetime as followers of Jesus Christ, doing our best to live as Jesus taught, look forward to the reward of eternal life in heaven. So then what about the person who did not know Christ, or perhaps never nurtured their relationship with God but later in life had a conversion experience that drew them to Jesus? They too, will be rewarded with eternal life. One might proclaim, "That's not fair!" This is the way of God, it is real, merciful, and forgiving love. It is the love of God for all his people, whether they knew him all their lives or came to know him more recently. All who love God and follow the commandment of Jesus to love one another can live with the sure and certain hope that they will be one with God forever.

For us as Christians, this is one more reminder of the need to learn to love unconditionally, to not engage in judging another and most importantly that we work with our Church to bring the Good News of Jesus Christ to the world. This is what we call evangelization and by our baptism we are called to a life of helping others to know Jesus. Certainly, this begins in our families, but we must also be conscious of the need to live it daily with all people, co-workers, friends, strangers, even our enemies. We are called to love all. And in our loving others, we are living out our baptism.

Take time this week to think about how you have and how you will continue to share God's love with family, neighbor, friend, and stranger. For in bringing others to Christ, you assist in opening the path to eternal life – yours and theirs. Have a great week!

Blessings,
Deb Rudolph
